summer scents

NOTHING'S WORSE THAN a strong perfume on a hot and humid day. It can overpower an elevator, thicken the air in a boardroom or ruin a lunch. Instead of dabbing on a heavy fragrance left over from winter, try one of the lighter summer potions that'll keep you feeling fresh all day.

EDITED BY KAYTIE DOWLING

Hanae Mori Butterfly Eau Fraiche
The limited edition perfume blends geranium and grapefruit to create an ultra-light and very wearable scent. $65, Nordstrom

Eau Gourmande in Violette by Laura Mercier
The delicate fusion of violet leaves, mimosa and peony won't overwhelm. $50, Sephora

Lotus Blossom & Water Lily by Jo Malone
Mandarin, honeysuckle and a hint of amber dance together in this decidedly non-floral fragrance. Musky, but not overpowering, the scent makes cloying, sweet potions seem juvenile. $50-$95, Neiman Marcus

Andy Warhol Union Square by Bond No. 9
Sweet and floral notes of freesia, green stems and lily of the valley combine to create the elegant scent. $135-$195, Saks Fifth Avenue

Bouquet by Vera Wang
The smell of dew, paper-white narcissus and white iris root won't disappoint those in search of something crisp.

Le Muguet by Annick Goutal
Bunches of lily of the valley inspired this perfume. The bottle is one of a five-part collection. $80 for the single bottle, $400 for the set. Bloomingdale's

Giorgio Armani Rose Alexandrie
The fragrance blends notes of rose and mimosa—a scent that reminds us of a walk through Longwood Gardens. $115, Saks Fifth Avenue

Marc Jacobs Basil
The designer may have found a way to bottle his fresh 2008 spring collection. The mix of basil, tomato leaf and lemongrass is oh-so-current and utterly wearable. $65, Bloomingdale's
