DARIA DEBÜTS HER LANCÔME COLLECTION

This month, Daria Werbowy augments her role as a Lancôme spokesmodel with the launch of the Daria Collection, available exclusively at Sephora and Lancôme boutiques. Inspired by the sumptuous earth tones of Brazil, the limited-edition eye-shadow quartet, lipstick, and gloss will enliven even pallid complexions, and, better yet, a portion of the proceeds benefits Centro Espacial Vik Muniz, an arts center for underprivileged youths in Rio de Janeiro.

Werbowy discovered the center during a 2007 trip for Lancôme, when she observed students performing the samba. "I was blown away," she says. "Their passion and enthusiasm really got to me." Brazilian-born, Brooklyn-based artist Vik Muniz co-founded the center in 2006. "They come from more than 100 different favelas—slums in the Rio area," says Muniz of the 300-plus students who attend classes ranging from set design to photography. When it came to developing the makeup, Werbowy, who plans on creating more cosmetics, rolled up her sleeves. "It was like being in art school again," she says. "I got to be very hands-on." And what does Muniz make of Werbowy's involvement? "For the kids, she became a model in a complete sense," enthuses the artist. "As a beauty and a citizen."

Bond No. 9 Andy Warhol Union Square eau de parfum with limited-edition Robert Lee Morris necklace.

WARHOL BOND
Fragrance plus jewelry plus art equals Bond No. 9's new Andy Warhol Union Square eau de parfum, the second in what will be a series of 12 Bond No. 9 Warhol scents. It comes packaged in a star-shaped flacon, complete with a limited-edition Robert Lee Morris necklace draped around the bottle. New York City's Union Square, the home of Warhol's second Factory, was the inspiration behind the fragrance—especially the neighborhood's farmers' market. "It's really a green, fresh, fruity floral, just like the Greenmarket itself," says Laurice Rahmé, Bond No. 9's founder.

Now available at Bond No. 9 boutiques and Saks Fifth Avenue, the Union Square scent might actually prove that Warhol was right when he said, "I never think that people die. They just go to department stores."
